

Libraries for Nursing Committee news

Over the next few issues of the Libraries for Nursing Bulletin we will be including a new "day in the life of..." feature to introduce our committee members. As a taster, here are brief introductions from four members of the LFN committee.

Claire Constable - I am an Online Resources Co-ordinator working in the Royal College of Nursing's Learning and Development Institute, having previously worked in the Royal College of Nursing Library. I support the development of evidence based online resources, and help put together a fortnightly clinical governance related current awareness bulletin. I have been on the Libraries for Nursing committee since 2007 and am currently the committee's Treasurer.

Sarah Kevill - I am a Subject Librarian at the University of Stirling. I support the information needs of pre and post registration students and the staff of our Department of Nursing and Midwifery. Alongside two other colleagues I also support students and staff in the Departments of Psychology and Applied Social Science and the Stirling Institute of Education. I have been on the committee of Libraries for Nursing since 2007 and my current role is as the Bulletin editor.

Jane Shelley - I work as Assistant Librarian, Academic Services (Faculty of Health and Social Care) at Anglia Ruskin University, based at the Chelmsford (Essex) campus. I am part of a team supporting pre and post registration nursing, midwifery, operating department practitioners and social work students and increasingly postgraduate students undertaking a variety of health and social care courses. I also support the general enquiry services providing enquiry desk, online enquiries (email and chat) and late night and Saturday duties. I have been a member of the LfN committee for a number of years and have undertaken the role of Chair for the last few years.

Sarah Thompson - I have worked for the NHS Direct Health Information Service for 10 years, the past 3 in a professional Librarian role. I support health information advisors in delivering an effective, efficient and customer-focused information service, and manage the resources within the Health Information Library. I joined the Libraries for Nursing committee in November 2008 and my current role is as the Study Day Organiser.
